

Nuveen Mortgage and Income Fund (JLS)

Marketing communication | As of 30 Jun 2025

- The Fund outperformed the benchmark ICE BofA U.S. ABS and CMBS Index for the quarter.
- Securitized credit overcame heightened volatility and spread widening in April, recovering its losses and advancing further in May and June, to end the second quarter with a gain overall.
- Asset-backed securities (ABS) and commercial mortgage-backed securities (CMBS) performed similarly and were the best performing sectors in the Fund. Mortgage-backed securities (MBS) had positive performance but lagged the other sectors.

Portfolio review

The Fund opportunistically allocates at least 65% of its managed assets to MBS, including residential mortgage-backed securities (RMBS) and CMBS, and up to 35% to non-mortgage-related ABS. Given the currently tight spreads in the market, the Fund remained tactical in seeking spread and credit opportunities consistent with the Fund's objective of high current income.

Relative value opportunities in securitized markets continued to be limited amid tight spread levels. The Fund's buying and selling activity remained highly selective. The Fund exited some higher-quality positions, including a credit risk transfer (CRT) security and a few esoteric ABS positions, which had experienced material spread tightening or were no longer a good fit for the Fund's strategy. Sales were driven by profit-taking and/or the opportunity to rotate into a more attractive position that we believe offered greater upside potential. Overall, there were no major changes to the portfolio's positioning.

Contributors

The largest contributors to the Fund's performance were below investment grade ABS, collateralized loan obligations (CLOs) and mezzanine CMBS that saw spread tightening during the quarter.

Detractors

The MBS sector lagged other sectors as MBS spreads were relatively unchanged over the quarter.

Among individual holdings, positions in solar ABS and higher-quality securities underperformed.
