

Nuveen Emerging Markets Impact Bond Fund

Marketing communication | As of 28 Feb 2025

- The Fund modestly trailed its benchmark, the J.P. Morgan Emerging Markets Bond Global Diversified Index, in February.
- Hard currency emerging markets (EM) debt performed well in February as U.S. rates continued to fall amid mounting concerns about economic growth. Local currency EM also produced gains but lagged hard currency as the U.S. dollar strengthened. Credit spreads widened as policy uncertainty intensified, particularly with regard to tariffs and geopolitics.
- EM net flows turned positive (+0.3 billion) after four consecutive months of outflows. Hard currency funds attracted inflows of $1 billion, while local currency flows remained negative at -$0.7 billion.

Contributors

Currency (FX): The Fund's modest exposure to a diversified basket of local currency bonds aided relative performance despite U.S. dollar strengthening in February. The most notable contributors were the Brazilian real and the Colombian peso.

Duration positioning: Although duration positioning detracted overall, exposure to EM and euro rates helped slightly.

Detractors

Country allocation: Overweights in Rwanda and Senegal sovereign debt detracted, as did the Fund's zero weight in Lebanon, which does not meet our minimum environmental, social and governance (ESG) criteria.

Portfolio positioning

As of February month-end, the Fund's largest country overweight positions were Brazil, where our exposure is broadly diversified across corporate use-of-proceeds positions and sovereign debt; Chile, with holdings in various use-of-proceeds sovereign and corporate positions, along with debt from corporate best-in-class ESG issuers; and Serbia, where our selections consist of general-purpose sovereign debt.

Our largest underweights were Saudi Arabia, China and Oman. Saudi Arabia and Oman did not meet the Fund's minimum ESG requirements. Similarly, ESG and transparency concerns resulted in the Fund's zero weight in China.

Outlook

The fundamental picture for EM looks quite healthy in the early days of 2025. However, although there are lingering questions about U.S. policy direction, particularly relating to global trade given continued posturing on tariffs. Across much of the EM universe, economic buffers have been rebuilt, several International Monetary Fund (IMF) backstops are in place, central banks have reinforced commitments to inflation targeting and many troubled economies have recently completed debt restructurings. Among both investment grade and high yield EM bonds, credit ratings upgrades exceed downgrades by a 2:1 ratio, and sovereign defaults are expected to be under 1% in 2025.

For EM sovereign bonds, excess risk premium and relative value against historically tight developed-market credit spreads continue. We believe the below-investment grade segment still offers compelling opportunities for attractive yield and excess return potential, although we remain selective when adding incremental risk given the volatile policy and macro backdrop.

Meanwhile, in our view, EM corporates can be a source of added alpha in 2025, as long as market liquidity and access remain intact. We believe the benefits of EM corporates may be best realized when complemented with sovereigns in a broadly diversified portfolio. This provides exposure to highly competitive (and in many cases global) companies where there may be substantial spread advantages relative to comparably rated developed market corporates (and their sovereign counterparts).

Important information on risk

Investing involves risk; principal loss is possible. There is no guarantee the Fund's investment objectives will be achieved. Because the Impact Criteria and/or Nuveen's Environmental Social Governance (ESG) investment criteria may exclude investments of certain issuers for non-financial reasons, the Fund may forgo some market opportunities available to funds that do not use these criteria. This may cause the Fund to underperform the market as a whole or other funds that do not use an Impact Criteria or ESG investment strategy or that use a different methodology or different factors to determine an investment's impact and/or ESG investment criteria. Non-U.S. investments involve risks such as currency fluctuation, political and economic instability, lack of liquidity and differing legal and accounting standards. These risks are magnified in emerging markets. Credit risk arises from an issuer's ability to make interest and principal payments when due, as well as the prices of bonds declining when an issuer's credit quality is expected to deteriorate. Interest rate risk occurs when interest rates rise causing bond prices to fall. The issuer of a debt security may be able to repay principal prior to the security's maturity, known as prepayment (call) risk, because of an improvement in its credit quality or falling interest rates. In this event, this principal may have to be reinvested in securities with lower interest rates than the original securities, reducing the potential for income. Investments in below investment grade or high yield securities are subject to liquidity risk and heightened credit risk. Investments in debt securities issued or guaranteed by governments or governmental entities are subject to the risk that an entity may delay or refuse to pay interest or principal on its sovereign debt because of cash flow problems, insufficient foreign reserves, or political or other considerations. In this event, there may be no legal process for collecting sovereign debts that a governmental entity has not repaid. A complete description of the risks of investing in the Fund can be found in the Key Investment Information Document(s) (KIID) and the Prospectus. Responsible investing incorporates Environmental Social Governance (ESG) factors that may affect exposure to issuers, sectors, industries, limiting the type and number of investment opportunities available, which could result in excluding investments that perform well.
